II. Statement of Research Interests

My research focuses on the etiology and interplay of maladaptive stress responding and risk behaviors, with an emphasis on how anxiety vulnerability may enhance the likelihood of substance use problems. Although my work spans the life course, my primary interest is in risk and selective intervention during adolescence and emerging adulthood. For instance, I study how significant facets of adolescent development (e.g., puberty, sensitivity to social stress) contribute to the onset and maintenance of anxiety psychopathology and problematic alcohol use behaviors. As a developmental psychopathologist my work reflects an intersection between traditional developmental and clinical domains, and an integrative, interdisciplinary approach is essential to my research program. As such, I employ a variety of methodological approaches, including experimental psychopathology techniques, multi-informant, multi-modal (e.g., skin conductance, salivary hormone levels), self-report, interview, and short-term prospective designs.

III. Appointments

2018-Present	Associate Professor, Behavioral Science, Department of Psychology University of North Texas
2012-2018	Assistant Professor, Behavioral Science, Department of Psychology University of North Texas
2009-2011	National Institutes of Health, NIAAA Pre-doctoral Fellow University of Arkansas
2007-2011	Doctoral Academy Fellow, Department of Psychology University of Arkansas

IV. Education

Doctor of Philosophy, Experimental Psychology, May 2012
Master of Arts, Experimental Psychology, December 2009
Bachelor of Arts, Psychology, December 2006, Summa Cum Laude
